ABOUT FIJI

Fiji, a country in the South Pacific, is an archipelago of more than 300 islands just East of Australia and North of New Zealand. Scattered across 1,290,000 square kilometers of ocean, it's a tropical paradise of palm-fringed white sand beaches and lush rainforests ringed by thriving coral reefs and fish-filled lagoons.

Fiji's population of more than 880,000 is a melting pot of indigenous Fijians (i-Taukei), Indo-Fijians, Chinese, Part-Europeans and other South Pacific Islanders who call Fiji home. Despite their varied cultural backgrounds, locals are collectively referred to as Fijians.

English is Fiji's official language, but you'll often find that most people are bilingual-speaking Fijian or Hindustani as well.

Located south of the equator, Fiji boasts a warm, comfortable sub-tropical climate. The average daily temperature sits between about 26° and 31°C or 78° and 87° F, evenings in the cooler months can get slightly chillier, but even in the peak summer months it doesn't get unbearably hot. October is Fiji's dry season, offering shorter but sunnier days, with coastal areas getting a bit cool evening so take a light jacket to keep warm while sipping cocktails at the beach bar. The temperature is only slightly lower than the wet season.
