ABOUT LA PAZ

La Paz, Mexico is a vibrant coastal city located on the Sea of Cortez in Baja California Sur. Known for its rich marine life, laid-back atmosphere, and beautiful desert-meets-ocean landscapes, it's a favorite destination for divers, snorkelers, and eco-tourists. The city itself offers a blend of authentic Mexican culture, fresh seafood, and a scenic waterfront malecón (boardwalk) lined with shops, cafes, and public art. With mild weather in the fall and winter, La Paz is ideal for both adventure and relaxation. It's less touristy than Cabo but offers world-class diving, kayaking, and island excursions, making it a hidden gem for nature lovers and ocean enthusiasts.

DIVING AND SNORKELING HIGHLIGHTS

Situated on the southeastern edge of Mexico's Baja California Peninsula, La Paz is one of the easiest warm water dive destinations to reach from the US. The area's diversity of dive sites includes wrecks, caves, offshore pinnacles, and rocky reefs, as well as some sheltered inshore diving and snorkeling in the Bay of La Paz.

Enjoy 10 dives with complementary Nitrox for all divers while experiencing the "World's Largest Aquarium," as quoted by the famous Jacques Cousteau.

By far the region's biggest attraction is year-round access to some of the oceans' most impressive pelagic species. Depending on the time of year, divers can expect to spot whale sharks, hammerhead sharks, sea lions, mobula rays, several species of whales, and a myriad of other local and migratory species. There is so much marine life in this area that La Paz is included in the Sea of Cortez UNESCO World Heritage Site designation.
